

TrailerDomes.com

Scandinavian engineering

UPDATE – July 2022

Dear fellow astro enthusiast.

You are receiving this update since you have signed up for newsletters or have been in close contact in some other way.

The search for industrial partners has been initiated. I think the best way of making the mobile observatories commercially available is to hand over the business development to younger professionals. To simply let them take on this great but also rather challenging opportunity. Which indeed will be to introduce a whole new product line in the global astronomy equipment industry. As you already might know from earlier newsletters, I humbly must admit that I am too old for that kind of endeavors, that's why.

An international business broker agency has already been engaged, although their possible involvement will be further down the line. I first want to personally do the search and take the initial contacts with potential partners. In the capacity of sole founder & shareholder and sole inventor & patent holder.

As with so many things nowadays, the first steps will primarily be done by digital means. And here, you just might want to chop in yourself a little bit? Trailer domes AB is now present on the big media platforms. But only very recently, so I therefore kindly ask if you would like to follow the company's pages. And perhaps even share their posts, occasionally?

That would be a great help for expanding the pages' reach, i.e. their networking & search capabilities! In case of interest just click here to enter into each of them:

LinkedIn Facebook Twitter YouTube

Several of you have already followed and liked the pages – thanks a lot, I really appreciate it!

Finally, the website has been upgraded to reflect today's status. Above all the Contact section. And the earlier announced Archive is now added to the menu – containing newsletters, videos and technical documentation.

Best regards, and clear skies!
Anders Hjelset, founder of Trailer domes AB
<https://www.trailerdomes.com/>